Annotation

Methodology for the use of the National Qualifications Framework (NQF) in vocational corporate training is a comprehensive guide aimed at the effective implementation and use of the NQF in enterprises. The aim of the methodology is to provide corporate trainers, HR managers and HR managers with clear and practical guidance on how to integrate the NQF into training processes and employee development. The methodology describes procedures for identifying relevant qualifications, for assessing and verifying acquired skills and competences and for developing new qualifications, training plans and programmes. The methodology includes good practice examples of the use of the NQF system in vocational corporate training. Overall, this methodology facilitates enterprises to upgrade the skills of their employees, leading to increased productivity, quality of work and competitiveness in the market. The developed methodology is the basis for the development of the new professional qualifications Trainer of Vocational Skills in Production and Trainer of Vocational Enterprise Training.
